

DOODY MECHANICAL

AWARDED CONTRACT FOR THE
CARLETON COLLEGE ARTS UNION BUILDING

Dec. 8, 2009 — McGough Construction awards DOODY MECHANICAL the contract for the Carleton College Arts Union Building at their Northfield, Minn., campus. The project is in the final design stage and mechanical construction begins spring 2010.

Doody Mechanical looks forward to a great project.

PROJECT OVERVIEW:

Carleton College is in the process of turning the former Northfield Middle School into The Arts Union, a facility geared toward creative collaboration to support multiple student and classroom projects. The revitalized facility will allow faculty members to teach with words, images, sounds, and narrative in a variety of media.

In addition to housing the departments of Art and Art History, Cinema and Media Studies (CAMS), English, Theater, and Dance, the facility will include a teaching museum, a dramatic theater, a cinema theater, a small black box theater, dance studios, the student-operated radio station, KRLX, and a coffee shop. The building will also be home to the Presentation, Events and Production Support (PEPS) office and the Digital Asset Resource Center, a shared, interdisciplinary library containing the College's audio, video, and digital resources.

The first phase of construction is scheduled to be complete in fall of 2011. ♻️

USGBC and related logo is a trademark owned by the U.S. Green Building Council and is used by permission.*