

HOOKED ON SAFETY

June 7, 2010 — In an effort to attain a zero accident safety culture in workers lives both on and off the job, INDUSTRIAL CONTRACTORS INC. (ICI) recently invited Billy Robbins to present in North Dakota. Robbins is an internationally known motivational speaker who lost both of his hands in a work-related electrical accident.

Audience members included ICI's field front-line supervisors, management and office staff and representatives from OSHA, Workforce Safety and Insurance (workers compensation), labor representatives and upper-level owner representatives. Sixty-five guests attended.

"[Billy's] message of zero accidents is attainable and nothing less than superior is acceptable," said Jude M. Reilly, manager of marketing and business development for ICI. "I believe the presentation proved to be another positive step toward our goal." ♻️

USGBC and related logo is a trademark owned by the U.S. Green Building Council and is used by permission.*